

PANELISTS AND MODERATORS BIOGRAPHIES

State of Hispanic Race and Ethnicity: Census 2020 Changes and Implications for Addressing Social Inequalities

Darrick Hamilton is the director of the doctoral program in public and urban policy, and jointly appointed as an associate professor of economics and urban policy at The Milano School of International Affairs, Management and Urban Policy and the Department of Economics, The New School for Social Research at The New School in New York. He is a faculty research fellow at the Schwartz Center for Economic Policy Analysis at The New School, co-associate director of the Cook Center on Social Equity, and the immediate past-president of the National Economic Association (NEA). Professor Hamilton is a stratification economist, whose work fuses scientific methods to examine the causes, consequences and remedies of racial and ethnic inequality which includes an examination of the intersection of identity, racism, colorism, and socioeconomic outcomes.

Tanya K. Hernandez is the Archibald R. Murray Professor of Law at Fordham University School of Law. Professor Hernandez's scholarly interest is in the study of comparative race relations and anti-discrimination law, and her in that area has been published in numerous university law reviews, such as Cornell Harvard, N.Y.U., U.C. Berkeley, Yale, and in news outlets, such as the New York Times, among other publications. Her next book, "Multiracials and Civil Rights: Are Mixed-Race Stories of Discrimination a New Kind of Racism" is forthcoming from NYU Press.

Howard Hogan is Chief Demographer at the U.S. Census Bureau. Dr. Hogan has worked on four population censuses, population estimation, as well as household and business surveys. His work includes the classification of race and data on same-sex-marriages. He has worked on cases involving the Constitution and the law. He holds a Ph.D. from Princeton's Office of Population Research, and an MPA from the Woodrow Wilson School. He is an Honorary Fellow of the American Statistical Association.

Nicholas Jones is the Director and Senior Advisor for Race/Ethnicity Research and Outreach in the Census Bureau's Population Division. He joined Census in 2000 to research race reporting patterns and the demographic characteristics of children in interracial families. Nicholas has authored numerous reports and presentations, and he is a renowned expert on the Multiracial population and the racial-ethnic diversity of the United States. Nicholas has been a key leader of the Census Bureau's extensive research to explore alternative approaches for improving race/ethnicity data, and he leads the Census Bureau's ongoing race/ethnicity research and outreach in preparation for the 2020 Census.

Mark Hugo Lopez is director of Hispanic research at Pew Research Center. He studies the attitudes and opinions of Latinos, Hispanic views of identity, the political engagement of Latinos in the nation's elections, and Latino youth. Lopez also coordinates the Center's National Survey of Latinos, an annual nationwide survey of Hispanics. He was the research director of the Center for Information and Research on Civic Learning and Engagement (CIRCLE) as well as a research assistant professor at the School of Public Policy at the University of Maryland. Lopez received his doctorate in economics from Princeton University. He is an author of reports about the Hispanic electorate, Hispanic identity and immigration. Lopez frequently appears in national and international media in both Spanish and English.

Nancy Lopez is associate professor of sociology at the University of New Mexico. Dr. Lopez directs and co-funded the Institute for the Study of “race” and Social Justice, and she is the founding coordinator of the New Mexico Statewide Race, Gender, Class Data Policy Consortium. Dr. Lopez’s scholarship, teaching and service is guided by the insights of intersectionality for interrogating inequalities across social outcomes and developing contextualized solutions that advance social justice. Her current work includes a national representative survey of Latinos that examines health outcomes through a new measure of racialization she calls “street race” and “street race-gender.” She is also conducting content analysis on official documents of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and the U.S. Census Bureau.

Rogelio Sáenz is Dean of the College of Public Policy and holds the Mark G. Yudof Endowed Chair at the University of Texas at San Antonio. Sáenz has written extensively in the areas of demography, Latina/os, race and ethnic relations, inequality, immigration, public policy, and social justice. He is co-author of Latinos in the United States: Diversity and Change and co-editor of The International Handbook of the Demography of Race and Ethnicity. Sáenz regularly writes op-ed essays with his contributions appearing in such newspapers as the Austin American-Statesman, Baltimore Sun, Dallas Morning News, Houston Chronicle, New York Times, San Antonio Express-News and writes a monthly column for Ahora Sí, the Spanish-language newspaper of the Austin American-Statesman.

Carlo Sanchez is currently serving his first term as Maryland State Delegate. He represents District 47B, which is the State's first and only Latino majority district. He is a lifelong resident of Prince George’s County. He has been active in his community for years, serving as President of the Carole Highlands Neighborhood Association, and Secretary of the Prince George’s County Democratic Central Committee. He remains focused on ensuring more resources for our schools, helping keep our communities safe and ensuring a common sense approach to the implementation of the Purple Line. Carlo lives in Carole Highlands with his wife, Mary, an operating room nurse.

Andrea Senteno is a Legislative Staff Attorney with MALDEF’s Washington, DC office. She is responsible for the organization’s legislative and regulatory portfolios on immigration and voting rights, and assists with litigation in the Southeast Region. Her work includes advancing equal voting rights for Latinos, such as a legislative fix to the Voting Rights Act of 1965 and policies to ensure Latinos are accurately counted in the U.S. Census. Prior to attending law school, Andrea advocated for government transparency and accountability in New York, focusing on election reform issues. She received her J.D. from American University Washington College of Law and B.A. from Pitzer College.

Armando Trull is a Senior Reporter at WAMU 885 FM, the NPR news station in Washington where he covers Race and Identity. He is an EMMY award winning bilingual multi-media journalist whose previous work has been read, heard and seen by millions on NPR, WUSA9-TV, the Huffington Post, Univision, Telemundo, TV Azteca and UPI. He has traveled extensively throughout Central America covering the exodus of youth and immigrants to the United States, transnational gangs and its impact on the metro

DC region. He does private philanthropic work with Central American youth locally and in El Salvador and Honduras. When not working he loves to cook, especially in his outdoor pizza oven.

Gustavo Velasquez is director of the Urban Institute's Washington-Area Research Initiative, a cross-center initiative and multidisciplinary program of evidence and policy analysis focused on the national capital region. Velasquez served for nearly three years as assistant secretary for fair housing and equal opportunity at the US Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). He served on behalf of the president as the strategic lead of the fair housing and inclusive community agenda for the Obama administration. During his tenure, HUD achieved groundbreaking enforcement victories in fair lending and in major housing discrimination cases.

Salvador Vidal-Ortiz is associate professor in the sociology department at American University. His work has focused on social issues of impact to LGBT populations, both in the U.S. and abroad (with Fulbright research conducted in Colombia, and a transgender-ing education collaboration in Argentina). His areas of research include gender and sexuality, migration and displacement, and race and ethnicity within the U.S., and racialization processes among Latinas/os. He has edited The Sexuality of Migration: Border Crossings and Mexican Immigrant Men, and Queer Brown Voices: Personal Narratives of Latina/o LGBT Activism. His co-authored book, Race and Sexuality, is coming out in Spring 2018. He is currently working on a manuscript on race, gender and sexuality in Santería (an Afro-Cuban religious-cultural practice) as practiced in the U.S.

Andrés Villarreal is Professor of Sociology at the University of Maryland-College Park and Faculty Associate at the Maryland Population Research Center. His current research focuses on international migration, race and ethnicity, crime and violence, and social inequality. In a current research project funded by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD) he is examining the long term earnings assimilation of immigrants to the U.S.